RUNNING CHASES

STARTING A CHASE

A chase can start out of a role-playing situation, or after someone flees a combat and the other pursue them.

THE CARD TRACK: To start the chase, lay out the initiative cards 1 to 10 in order on the table. Determine a get-away spot or hideout where the prey will be safe, located at card 1. Place the prey somewhere around card 4, depending on how long the chase should be. Place the pursuers 2 to 3 cards higher to give both sides a decent chance, closer means that they have almost caught up.

RANGE: The card track represents the chase route with each card representing about 10 meters of range: Two participants are within 10 meters of each other when they are on the same card, and within 20 meters when they are on adjacent cards, and so on.

CHASE ROUNDS

Chases are played out in rounds, just like combat. At the start of each round, the GM picks or randomly selects a chase obstacle and reveals it to the players. Instead of drawing initiative, go through the card track from 1 to 10, prey always going before the pursuers.

CHASE ACTIONS: On your turn, you can perform one chase action, as listed below. When you are attacked before your turn, you can give up your turn to Parry or Dodge. Free actions can be performed as normal.

MOVEMENT: During a chase, you don't get your normal movement since every participant runs in the same direction, roughly cancelling each other out. But you can gain ground on your opponents with the DASH action.

If you move over rough terrain, you must first make an ACROBATICS [RIDING] roll (not an action). If it fails, cannot move during your turn. If you cannot move during your turn, you cannot perform actions that require movement and increase your place in the turn order by 1.

MOUNTS: If a participant is riding a mount, the chase rules work as normal – but use the applicable skill for mounted participant, indicated in [brackets]. In a bustling street environment, a mount is not necessarily faster, but the rider gets a boon to AWARENESS.

CHASE OBSTACLES

At the start of every chase round, the GM picks or randomly selects a chase obstacle and reveals it to the players. See the example obstacle tables starting on page 3, or use the cards in the appendix. Don't use the same obstacle twice in a row – best limit them to once per chase.

These obstacles provide flavor to the chase scene and affect the participants' actions. Feel free to adapt and re-flavor the obstacles to the situation at hand, or create new obstacles as needed.

ENDING A CHASE

A chase ends when the pursuer catch up to the prey or the prey successfully hides or escapes the pursuers.

If a pursuer ends their turn next to the prey, they can try to grapple, topple or make a melee attack against the prey. If successful, the chase ends in combat or role-play.

The prey can escape by reaching 1 at the end of the round, if all pursuers drop out, or by sucessfully using the HIDE action. A pursuer drops out if their place in the turn order is or exceeds 10 at the end of the round.

CHASE ACTIONS

DASH: You run, ride, or swim as fast as you can. Decrease your place in the turn order by 1.

IMPROVISED ACTION: You take advantage of an opportunity that presents itself in your surroundings. Follow the instructions that are part of the chase obstacle and marked as an improvised action.

COMBAT ACTION: You use your turn to perform a combat action (Rulebook, p. 42) – except Dash, Parry or Dodge, since these have their own chase versions.

DEFEND (PREY ONLY): You pay close attention to any attacks coming from behind you. This enables you to parry or dodge once in reaction to other participants.

HIDE (PREY ONLY): You quickly duck into a side alley or behind cover. Make an opposed roll for SNEAKING against the pursuer's AWARENESS.

If a pursuer is next to you, you cannot HIDE, this get a bane within 20 meters and a boon above 50 meters.

- ♦ If you win, you can choose to escape or to make a sneak attack on your next turn.

CUT OFF (PURSUER ONLY): You try to cut off the prey. Make an opposed AWARENESS roll between you and the prey. This gets a bane if you are within 30 meters.

- ♦ If you win, you instantly catch up to the prey and can attempt to end the chase.
- ♦ If you lose, you get lost and drop out of the chase.

DRAGONS & DEMONS

If you roll a dragon on your chase action, you can choose one of the following additional effects:

- ◆ Decrease your place in the turn order by 1.
- ◆ Grant an ally a boon to their next roll.
- ◆ Give an opponent a bane to their next roll.

If you roll a demon on your chase action, you trip, fall or stumble, and increase your place in the turn order by 1.

MONSTERS IN A CHASE

Monsters can participate in chases just like any other character, although they are almost never the prey. On their turn, you can use their monster attacks if it makes sense. If it does not make sense, for example, because they are not in range of a target, simply use the DASH action or another appropriate chase action instead.

CHASE VARIANTS

RACES

You can use variant rules to run races, in which all the participants try to reach the same goal first. In that case, card 1 represents the goal and the following rules apply:

- ◆ All participants start on the same card (or below, if they have a head start).
- ◆ Everyone counts as pursuers to those in front of them and as prey to those behind them.
- ◆ The participant who reaches 1 first, wins the race.

Ties in the turn order between opponents are decided with an open opposed AGILITY [RIDING] roll.

If multiple participants form a team, they win or lose together. If there is a tie in turn order between allies, they can freely decide who goes first.

OPEN ENDED CHASE

If there is no clear getaway or safehouse for the prey, you can also run an open ended chase. To do so, use the following modifications:

- ◆ Instead of a goal, place the prey on card 1.
- ◆ The prey does not change their own place. Instead the prey's DASH increases everyone else's initiative.
- ◆ The prey can only win if they successfully HIDE or if all pursuers drop out of the chase.
- ◆ If there are multiple prey, only the one with the lowest movement rate can use the DASH maneuver.

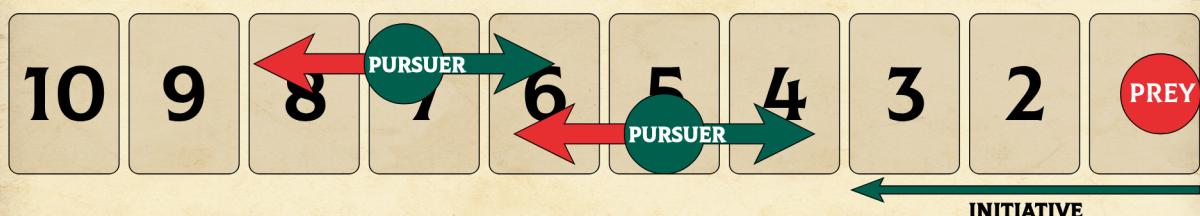

To make it easier on the prey, you can shorten the track to around 6 or 7, for pursuers to drop out more quickly.

INITIATIVE CARD TRACKS

STANDARD SETUP: Every participant's DASH decreases their own place. (Prey in red, pursuers in green)

OPEN ENDED CHASE SETUP: The prey's DASH increases the pursuers' place in the turn order.

DUNGEON CHASES

While chases in a town or forest take place over large distances with many options to hide or escape, this is not the case in cramped caves or dungeons. It therefore makes more sense to run the chase as a combat and make use of improvised weapon cards (or the tables in the Rulebook p.120).

To facilitate chases in a dungeon, use the list of random features and improvised weapons below. These can also be used in a cave, especially when it is being used as a living space with things like doors, furniture or crates in it – like a bandit hideout.
