

KNUTHILDA

"I remember when we were younger, my great-cousin Knutti used to take me wyvern-hunting in the low-lands. Those monster hunting days are behind me! I wonder what has kept her going all this time."

— OKLAD, WEAPONS SELLER

Knuthilda is a professional monster hunter. She specializes in tracking down beasts and either capturing them for taming or carving them up for valuable parts. Due to her many successful hunts and captures, she has gained a reputation, and monster-plagued villagers are generally happy to see her.

She is direct and arrogant. The player characters will have to show that they are capable and can succeed in bringing down a monster. Even then, they will only get her to acknowledge that they are not completely useless.

GOALS & MOTIVATION

Knuthilda is not just in it for the money – although that is an important part of it. She thrives on the hunt and loves to brag and reminisce about her best catches.

You cannot get to her with insults or underestimating her abilities – she knows her own strengths too well and needs nobody's approval. She loathes when people try to cheat her out of a hard-won trophy or reward.

USING KNUTHILDA IN PLAY

Knuthilda is a great competition NPC. When the player characters are on the hunt for a beast, Knuthilda might also be on the hunt for it. She will not overtly attack the group but tries to hinder their progress in travel or place fake tracks to lead them off course.

When hunting particularly dangerous monsters, she has been known to hire help from another hunter or adventurer (Rulebook, page 105). She can be convinced with PERSUASION to team up to bring down an especially powerful monster. You also need a roll on BARTERING to agree on how to divide the spoils.

KNUTHILDA

Knuthilda is a jovial and competitive dwarf monster hunter who likes to brag about her past victories. She laughs at amateurs trying to rival her and can only be won over by actual competence.
